

Building on a Promise

The Memorial Foundation brings people, programs and partners together to meet the emerging health needs of the community. That is the promise in our mission statement. Over the past year, the foundation fulfilled that promise with the generous support and partnership of the Yakima community.

We have fulfilled the promise to begin expansion of Children's Village to better accommodate children needing services; the promise to find a home for Cottage in the Meadow hospice care center, where families can spend their final days together in comfort; the promise to develop Transitions palliative care program for those with life-limiting illness; the promise to expand Tomando Control de su Salud, to increase the self-management of chronic disease.

These projects began as unmet needs in our community and now they've grown from the conceptual to the concrete. They are the promise for a better community.

"We often go to the community with a concept—to address a need," says Anne Caffery, President and CEO of The Memorial Foundation. "I am, as always, awed by the support we receive from local families and partners. This year has been rewarding, because there are so many magnificent projects that our community have come together to help us make a reality. It is wonderful to provide these tangible results back to the community."

The Foundation hopes to reach the fundraising goals to complete the Children's Village expansion project as well as break ground on Cottage in the Meadow in 2010 or 2011. Caffery says she knows with the support of the community, these are attainable goals. ■

“ We value the contribution of each and every donor. The development of these projects and the continued success of existing programs depends on the generosity of our community. We just want to say a thousand times over, thank you for your support. ”
